This is a PDF file of an unedited manuscript that has been accepted for publication. As a service to our customers we are providing this early version of the manuscript. The manuscript will undergo copyediting, typesetting, and review of the resulting proof before it is published in its final form. Please note that during the production process errors may be discovered which could affect the content, and all legal disclaimers that apply to the journal pertain.

Highlights

- Design examples can inspire creativity but may also constrain children's ideation in participatory design (PD)
- Design example use can result in both fixation and recycling behaviours in children
- Recycling from design examples can ensure the relevance of children's ideas
- Recycling from design examples can also invite novelty in children's ideas
- In PD the use of design examples need to be carefully planned and introduced to inspire and scaffold children's ideas
