This is a PDF file of an unedited manuscript that has been accepted for publication. As a service to our customers we are providing this early version of the manuscript. The manuscript will undergo copyediting, typesetting, and review of the resulting proof before it is published in its final form. Please note that during the production process errors may be discovered which could affect the content, and all legal disclaimers that apply to the journal pertain.

Highlights

- A comparison of the most common obesity-related comorbidities—diabetes, obstructive sleep apnea, hypertension, hyperlipidemia—between patients with a body mass index (BMI) of 30-49.9 kg/m² and BMI ≥ 50 kg/m² (super obese) did not reveal a difference in resolution rates between the two groups.
- Super obese patients achieved similar levels of postoperative percent total body weight loss (%TBWL) to patients with a BMI of 30-49.9 kg/m².
