This is a PDF file of an unedited manuscript that has been accepted for publication. As a service to our customers we are providing this early version of the manuscript. The manuscript will undergo copyediting, typesetting, and review of the resulting proof before it is published in its final form. Please note that during the production process errors may be discovered which could affect the content, and all legal disclaimers that apply to the journal pertain.

Highlights

- ACT for “at-risk” Veterans undergoing orthopedic surgery improved pain and opioid use outcomes.
- The effect of ACT on pain and opioid use was strongest for those without surgical complications.
- Pain acceptance and values-based behaviors were related to better post-surgical outcomes.
- Providing a therapy prior to surgery for at-risk patients may improve post-surgical outcomes.
