This is a PDF file of an unedited manuscript that has been accepted for publication. As a service to our customers we are providing this early version of the manuscript. The manuscript will undergo copyediting, typesetting, and review of the resulting proof before it is published in its final form. Please note that during the production process errors may be discovered which could affect the content, and all legal disclaimers that apply to the journal pertain.

Highlights

- Permanent supportive housing is negatively associated with homeless counts.
- Causal effects are identified on the basis of significantly lagged funding decisions.
- The impact of permanent supportive housing on homelessness is negative but modest.
- Expanded permanent supportive housing does not explain recent homelessness decline.
