

Author's Accepted Manuscript

The Influence of a rural environment on patient access and outcomes for bariatric surgery

Kristie L. Bergmann, Stephanie Cox, Lawrence Tabone

www.elsevier.com/locate/buiderv

PII: S1550-7289(16)30812-7
DOI: <http://dx.doi.org/10.1016/j.soard.2016.11.009>
Reference: SOARD2827

To appear in: Surgery for Obesity and Related Diseases

Cite this article as: Kristie L. Bergmann, Stephanie Cox and Lawrence Tabone, The Influence of a rural environment on patient access and outcomes for bariatric surgery, Surgery for Obesity and Related Diseases, <http://dx.doi.org/10.1016/j.soard.2016.11.009>

This is a PDF file of an unedited manuscript that has been accepted for publication. As a service to our customers we are providing this early version of the manuscript. The manuscript will undergo copyediting, typesetting, and review of the resulting galley proof before it is published in its final citable form. Please note that during the production process errors may be discovered which could affect the content, and all legal disclaimers that apply to the journal pertain.

The Influence of a Rural Environment on Patient Access and Outcomes for Bariatric Surgery

Kristie L. Bergmann, Ph.D.¹

Stephanie Cox, Ph.D.¹

Lawrence Tabone, M.D.²

West Virginia University School of Medicine

Department of Behavioral Medicine and Psychiatry¹

Department of Surgery²

Corresponding Author:
Lawrence Tabone, MD
Director of Bariatric Surgery
Assistant Professor, Department of Surgery
West Virginia University
Email: letabone@hsc.wvu.edu
Phone: 681-209-5072

Author disclosure statement: No competing financial interests exist

Download English Version:

<https://daneshyari.com/en/article/5661963>

Download Persian Version:

<https://daneshyari.com/article/5661963>

Daneshyari.com