

Author's Accepted Manuscript

Generating charged pharmaceutical Aerosols intended to improve targeted drug delivery in ventilated Infants

Landon Holbrook, Michael Hindle, P.Worth Longest

PII: S0021-8502(15)00088-9
DOI: <http://dx.doi.org/10.1016/j.jaerosci.2015.05.015>
Reference: AS4894

To appear in: Journal of Aerosol Science

Received date: 26 March 2015
Revised date: 20 May 2015
Accepted date: 27 May 2015

Cite this article as: Landon Holbrook, Michael Hindle, P.Worth Longest, Generating charged pharmaceutical Aerosols intended to improve targeted drug delivery in ventilated Infants, Journal of Aerosol Science, <http://dx.doi.org/10.1016/j.jaerosci.2015.05.015>

This is a PDF file of an unedited manuscript that has been accepted for publication. As a service to our customers we are providing this early version of the manuscript. The manuscript will undergo copyediting, typesetting, and review of the resulting galley proof before it is published in its final citable form. Please note that during the production process errors may be discovered which could affect the content, and all legal disclaimers that apply to the journal pertain.

Generating Charged Pharmaceutical Aerosols Intended to Improve Targeted Drug Delivery in Ventilated Infants

Landon Holbrook¹, Michael Hindle², and P. Worth Longest^{1,2*}

¹Department of Mechanical Engineering
Virginia Commonwealth University, Richmond, VA

²Department of Pharmaceutics
Virginia Commonwealth University, Richmond, VA

Running title: Generating Charged Pharmaceutical Aerosols

Submitted to: Journal of Aerosol Science

Dr. P. Worth Longest, PhD (* Corresponding author)
Virginia Commonwealth University
401 West Main Street
P.O. Box 843015
Richmond, VA 23284-3015
Phone: (804)-827-7023
Fax: (804)-827-7030
Email: pwlongest@vcu.edu

Keywords: wick electrospray, condensational aerosol generator, induction charger, mesh nebulizer, respiratory drug delivery, infants, mechanical ventilation

Download English Version:

<https://daneshyari.com/en/article/6344433>

Download Persian Version:

<https://daneshyari.com/article/6344433>

Daneshyari.com