This is a PDF file of an unedited manuscript that has been accepted for publication. As a service to our customers we are providing this early version of the manuscript. The manuscript will undergo copyediting, typesetting, and review of the resulting proof before it is published in its final form. Please note that during the production process errors may be discovered which could affect the content, and all legal disclaimers that apply to the journal pertain.

Highlights

- Childhood maltreatment is associated with problematic social media use.
- Avoidant attachment was associated with less problematic use.
- Anxious attachment was associated with more problematic use.
- Avoidant attachment and depression in series accounted for part of the relationship.
- Anxious attachment and depressive symptoms in series fully mediated the relationship.
