

Accepted Manuscript

Refugees' exclusion at work and the intersection with gender:
Insights from the Turkish-Syrian border

Lena Knappert, Angela Kornau, Meltem Figengül

PII: S0001-8791(17)30139-2
DOI: doi:10.1016/j.jvb.2017.11.002
Reference: YJVBE 3126

To appear in: Journal of Vocational Behavior

Received date: 28 February 2017
Revised date: 4 November 2017
Accepted date: 6 November 2017

Please cite this article as: Lena Knappert, Angela Kornau, Meltem Figengül , Refugees' exclusion at work and the intersection with gender: Insights from the Turkish-Syrian border. The address for the corresponding author was captured as affiliation for all authors. Please check if appropriate. Yjvbe(2017), doi:10.1016/j.jvb.2017.11.002

This is a PDF file of an unedited manuscript that has been accepted for publication. As a service to our customers we are providing this early version of the manuscript. The manuscript will undergo copyediting, typesetting, and review of the resulting proof before it is published in its final form. Please note that during the production process errors may be discovered which could affect the content, and all legal disclaimers that apply to the journal pertain.

Abstract

Today, about three million Syrian refugees are living in Turkey. This study investigates one key driver of refugees' societal integration, their inclusion or exclusion at work, with a particular focus on the intersection of refugee status and gender. To that end, we conducted and analyzed 20 semistructured interviews with male and female refugees, employers, and experts from governmental and nongovernmental organizations in Turkey. Building on our findings, we propose a multilayered framework that illustrates the interplay between national facilitators of refugees' exclusion, precarious employment practices within organizations, and refugees' individual-level implications. Further, we show that this interplay is particularly disadvantageous for female refugees, as it is when, for example, gendered roles prevail in their home and host societies. We discuss implications for future research and conclude by pointing out the relevance of this study for current political debates and various stakeholders inside and outside of Turkey.

Keywords: Refugees, inclusion, exclusion, intersectionality, gender, Turkey

Funding: This research did not receive any specific grant from funding agencies in the public, commercial, or not-for-profit sectors.

Download English Version:

<https://daneshyari.com/en/article/7247347>

Download Persian Version:

<https://daneshyari.com/article/7247347>

Daneshyari.com