[Acknowledgements]

We would like to thank the students of Cal School for their participation in this project, and to the Cal School faculty and staff for their assistance and facilitation. Nancy Adler, Ray Catalano, Wendi Gosliner, Bonnie Halpern-Felsher, Kris Madsen, Janet Tomiyama, Nicki Bush, Laura Gottlieb, Aric Prather, Emily Jacobs, Chris Myer, and Shannon Iaffaldano provided valuable feedback on project design. We are grateful for the expert research assistance of Vanessa Greenfield, the statistical modeling advice of Kevin Lewis, and colleagues in the Behavior Change Research Network at University of California, Berkeley and the Human Nature Lab at Harvard Medical School.

Contributions: MCP and EJO designed the study, MCP conducted fieldwork, conducted all data analysis. AB and CC provided the wearable RFID sensors infrastructure for monitoring the proximity networks. MCP drafted the manuscript and EJO, AB, and CC contributed to manuscript revision.

Funding/conflicts of interest: This work was conducted while MCP was in the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation (RWJF) Health & Society Scholars program, and the project benefited from a RWJF pilot grant. There are no reported conflicts of interest. The Committee on Human Subjects at UC Berkeley approved the original study protocol.
