

International Panel of Referees

The review process of Annals of Tourism Research calls for at least three referees assigned anonymously to each manuscript selected for evaluation. While some reviewers are editors of this journal, most are not.

The following list, generated through Elsevier's Editorial System, includes the names of those who reviewed one or more papers for Annals from September 2015 to October 2016. Reviews after this date will be acknowledged in Annals 67. The spelling of referees' names, their institutional affiliations, as well as their locations are based on reports retrieved from the system.

Annals of Tourism Research cannot perform its scholarly function without the help and cooperation of its editors and referees, who represent—as the following list demonstrates—many institutions from various countries and regions. The journal is indebted to them all for their contributions to the making and shaping of published papers and consequently to the placement of Annals as the leading academic journal in the field.
