

Author's Accepted Manuscript

Training Methods and assessment in endoscopic ultrasound

Dayna Early, Ricardo Badillo

PII: S1096-2883(17)30055-4
DOI: <http://dx.doi.org/10.1016/j.tgie.2017.07.002>
Reference: YTGIE50535

To appear in: Techniques in Gastrointestinal Endoscopy

Cite this article as: Dayna Early and Ricardo Badillo, Training Methods and assessment in endoscopic ultrasound, Techniques in Gastrointestinal Endoscopy, <http://dx.doi.org/10.1016/j.tgie.2017.07.002>

This is a PDF file of an unedited manuscript that has been accepted for publication. As a service to our customers we are providing this early version of the manuscript. The manuscript will undergo copyediting, typesetting, and review of the resulting galley proof before it is published in its final citable form. Please note that during the production process errors may be discovered which could affect the content, and all legal disclaimers that apply to the journal pertain.

Training Methods and assessment in endoscopic ultrasound

Dayna Early, MD and Ricardo Badillo, MD

Division of Gastroenterology, Department of Medicine, Washington University in St. Louis.

Correspondence:

Dayna Early, MD

660 S. Euclid Avenue

Campus Box 8124

St. Louis, MO 63110

e. dearly@wustl.edu

p. 314.454.5960

f. 314-454-5005

Abstract

Endoscopic ultrasound (EUS) is a valuable diagnostic and therapeutic procedure widely available in the United States. Expanding indications for its use have led to an increased interest in performing the procedure and a demand for training opportunities amongst both experienced endoscopists and fellowship trainees. Training most commonly occurs in supervised, structured, hands-on settings, with competency being assessed using procedure numbers and subjective assessments. Other means of training are available but are recommended only as an adjunct to

Download English Version:

<https://daneshyari.com/en/article/8732276>

Download Persian Version:

<https://daneshyari.com/article/8732276>

Daneshyari.com