This is a PDF file of an unedited manuscript that has been accepted for publication. As a service to our customers we are providing this early version of the manuscript. The manuscript will undergo copyediting, typesetting, and review of the resulting proof before it is published in its final form. Please note that during the production process errors may be discovered which could affect the content, and all legal disclaimers that apply to the journal pertain.

Highlights

- Couple negative interaction moderated mothers' and fathers' depression symptoms from 3- to 30-months postpartum.
- Mothers and fathers with high negative interaction scores experienced a steeper increase in depression symptoms from 3- to 30-months postpartum, than those with low negative interaction scores.
- Fathers with low positive interaction scores experienced an increase in anxiety symptoms from 3- to 30-months postpartum, whereas those with high positive interaction did not experience changes in anxiety symptoms.
