

Paying Hospital Specialists: Experiences and Lessons from Eight High-Income Countries

Alexander Geissler, Department of Health Care Management, TU Berlin, Germany

Friedrich Wittenbecher, Medical Department, Division of Hematology, Oncology and Tumor Immunology, Charité Berlin, Germany

Geoff Ballinger, Canadian Institute for Health Information, Canada

Robert Berenson, Urban Institute, USA

Karen Bloor, Department of Health Sciences, University of York, UK

Dana A. Forgiione, University of Texas at San Antonio, USA

Peer Köpf, Deutsche Krankenhausgesellschaft, Berlin, Germany

Madelon Kroneman, Netherlands institute for health services research (NIVEL), the Netherlands

Lisbeth Serden, Swedish National Board of Health and Welfare, Sweden

Raúl Suarez, Universitätsspital Zürich, Switzerland

Johan W. van Manen, Dutch Healthcare Authority, the Netherlands

Reinhard Busse, Department of Health Care Management, TU Berlin, Germany

Corresponding author: Wilm Quentin, Department of Health Care Management, Technische Universität (TU) Berlin, Straße des 17. Juni 135, 10623 Berlin, Germany, +49-30-31429420, wilm.quentin@tu-berlin.de

Highlights

- In Canada, the Netherlands and the USA, most specialists are self-employed.
- Many countries are shifting towards blended payment systems.
- In countries with salaries, systematic bonus systems have become more prominent.
- The Netherlands and Switzerland have bundled payments for specialists and hospitals.

Download English Version:

<https://daneshyari.com/en/article/8817937>

Download Persian Version:

<https://daneshyari.com/article/8817937>

Daneshyari.com